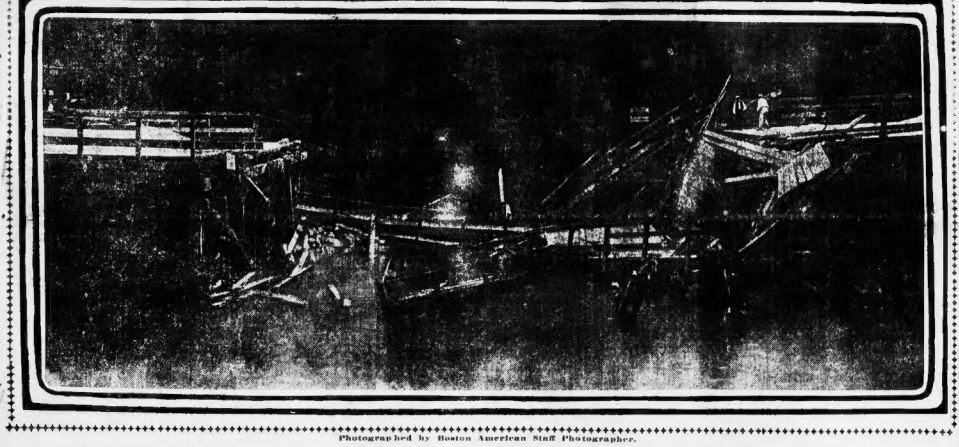
BRIDGE COLLAPSES; 8 MEN IN PERIL



Photographed by Boston American Staff Photographer.

COLLAPSED BRIDGE BETWEEN SUMMER AND CONGRESS STREETS IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE CRASH.

TEMPORARY STRUCTURE BETWEEN SUMMER AND CONGRESS STREETS GOES DOWN.

Eight men, employes of the paving department of the city of Boston, had a narrow escape from injury or death when part of the bridge between Summer and Congress streets, just beyond the South Station, suddenly collapsed to-day with a loud crash of crushing and falling timbers. The men were within a few of that part of the bridge which collapsed.

The bridge, which was built for temporary use while the Congress street bridge was being repaired, has for some time been used as a storing place for sand and paving blocks. Men were at work to-day at one side of a big pile of the blocks and sand when the weight caused that part of the bridge beneath the middle of the pile to crash down into the water. The wreck of the bridge shows great beams over a foot thick split in two. The bridge had been closed to travel for some time.

The collapse of the bridge drew a large crowd of people, which was increased by a rumor that quickly spread that the big Summer street bridge leading to South Boston was the one which had gone down.

Coroner To Clear The Motor Boat Mystery

SAYS GIRL WAS SLAIN

Jury Will Sit Until All possible Evidence Is Collected, He Declares.

Special to the Boston American.

BELFAST, Me., July 31. "Clara Bailey was not a suicide. Whatever the report of the coroner's jury, I am thoroughly convinced of that," declared Coroner Coombs to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day. "I have made arrangements to have the jury sit until all the evidence can be collected and presented to them. There is a mystery about her death which must be cleared up."

The jury adjourned until to-morrow, after hearing about thirty witnesses. It was brought out by W. E. Kotman of New York that when he first saw the body of the girl in the water her clothing was wrapped tightly around her head. The face was entirely concealed.

It is not believed by those who were present when the body was taken from the water that this condition of the clothing could have been brought about by the tide as the body floated in the bay.

Local Police Now Take Hold.

Mr. Kotman was on his way to the fishing grounds in a naphtha launch when boys on the shore told him they saw someone floating in the water. Mr. Kotman put his launch in that direction and took the body to the shore.

The local police have now taken hold of the matter, and City Marshal Kimball has begun an investigation. The sheriff has had it all his own way until now.

At the session of the coroner's jury yesterday afternoon, Edmund F. Clements told of having seen the body pass down by him on Monday, as he sat fishing from the wharf about a mile from where Miss Bailey lived. It went by him so quickly that he did not have time to examine it.

"I was walking along the river, looking for rags," Clements said. "It was about 11 o'clock in the morning. It was

"CAUGHT HER BY NECK."

"Just as it got in the glare of the electric light I saw a man bend over toward a woman. She screamed and the man caught her by the neck. That was all I heard or saw. In a minute the launch was in the darkness again and I didn't see or hear anything else."—Testimony of N. E. Durgin concerning couple in motor boat.

STEARNS CAR CLIMBS NOTCH HILL IN 3:04

By J. C. Kerrison.

THE CRAWFORD HOUSE, N. H., July 31. The morning broke bright and promising for the motorists' enjoyment, and before the seventh hour the majority were out preparing for the climb on Crawford Notch or else for an early departure home. Many of them who have been camping around here in the big six, thoroughly delighted with what they had enjoyed. The finishing touch up the Crawford Notch was in splendid condition, the road being wet and slippery, and as far as safety is concerned it is really more dangerous than the famous climb up Mount Washington.

Hugo Diss, sportsmanlike the Napier camp were before the meeting of the day's events, Basle was trying out the 120-horsepower Napier and climbing up the hill like an lightning-like speed, a sound got mixed in the chain sprocket, which was the pump and commutator, causing the pump sprocket clean off the cam shaft. This put the car to the bad, and it will not be seen in the contest.

The first car up the Notch was the Crawford driven by R. Crawford, who rescued the hill in the best style so far negotiating the same in 4 minutes 1 2-5 seconds.

Guy Vaughan in the big Stearns, driving in class for cars costing over $4,000 and not exceeding $5,000, rather surprised his natives with the cleverness of his work. He opened wide his throttle and kept it open all the way to the top of the hill, which he reached in 3 minutes 8 4-5 seconds, and which should give him the event, if being the fastest time yet recorded.

The next man to do the trick was Harry Wolaver in the forty-horsepower Columbia. Wolaver, always a clever and likewise careful driver, let the machine out to the safety limit and clocked 3:37 4-5 for the climb. Wolaver feels confident that he can get greater speed out of his car, but would not take chances on the turn.

N. L. Morrison in a Stearns thirty-five-horsepower then came up the hill in such a shape and speed as to reduce the showing made by Vaughan, his stablemate, his time being 3:04, which gave him the event, the only other contestant, Koppe, in a Columbia, clocking 4:01.

In the class for stock cars, costing between $850 and $1,200, H. F. Rogers of Boston with his Atlantic City prize winner, asked away from Koehler in the Buick. The latter never had a ghost of a show against Rogers, who fairly flew up the incline in 3 minutes 11 2-5 seconds, while Koehler clocked 4 minutes.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 31. The public prosecutor has begun proceedings against the members of the Duma who signed the Viborg manifesto.

The charge against the signers of the manifesto on which they will be tried is violation of Article 129 of the Criminal Code, which forbids "attempts to overthrow the existing government. This is virtually high treason, the maximum penalty for which is hard labor in the mines.

A dispatch from Bjoerkoe says that a member of the outlawed Duma from Grodno, S. P. Kontrashki, has been arrested by troops. He was taken on his arrival at his home at Bjoerkoe. No reason was given for the action.

ACCUSED OF HOMICIDE, BUT STILL RUNS CAR

NEW BEDFORD, July 31.—In defiance of public sentiment, James A. Parker, the strike-breaking motorman who is out on $2,000 bail on the charge of manslaughter in the killing of Henry Jolicoeur while running his car at high speed, is running a car through the streets here to-day.

The strikers are more confident to-day than they have been since they left their cars, for they believe that everything points to their winning the strike, now that President W. D. Mahon of the International Carmen's Association is coming here to-day or to-morrow from Detroit to conduct the strike in person.

Peter A. Miller, of Hartford, Ct., strike-breaking conductor, who was arrested last night for flashing a revolver in the faces of two special police officers, was arraigned to-day on the charge of carrying concealed weapon and was fined $15. William Ward, strike-breaker leader, paid the fine.

In the arrests of the strike-breakers who have been carrying weapons the strikers see another augury of success. They have labored the injunction of their leaders to preserve the law, and have held the public to their side.

CARS RUN WITHOUT GUARDS.

The strikers feel that public sentiment is with them, and they are doing everything in their power to prevent any outbreak against the law which could be traced to them and cause any change in public favor.

To-day for the first time the street cars have been running without any policemen on them to guard against interference. This was the first time that the police have not guarded the cars since last Wednesday, and the strikers think that it shows that the company is feeling the great expense to which it is being put. The policemen will be placed on the cars in-night, but during the daytime the company proposes to try to operate without guards.

Travel is light on the cars, and the

HOUGHTON AND DUTTON DAY ON BABY HOSPITAL

Two Hundred Little Ones and Mothers Guests of Big Firm on Cruise.

15 DOCTORS, 20 NURSES

This was Houghton and Dutton day on the Boston Floating Hospital.

Two hundred babies and their mothers were guests of the flourishing firm on a life giving pleasure cruise down the harbor.

Fifteen doctors and fifty nurses orderly cared for the comfort of the patients.

Fifty nine sick babies, sad eyed, hollow cheeked mites nestled in the cribs reserved for serious cases. There was sixty of them yesterday. In the quiet of the night, however, a white winged messenger flew aboard and took the soul of one of the little sufferers away.

Generous Gifts Made.

Houghton & Dutton never do things by halves. Not satisfied with providing the trustees of the floating hospital with sufficient money to cover the ordinary expenses of the cruise, they did some commissariat work on their own account, providing many wickies, cake and candy, hundreds of bunches of fragrant sweet peas and several large crates of peaches.

Large hearted Alexander McGregor, representing the firm, was aboard the floating hospital early. Just to see that Skipper Briggs had everything in ship shape order and Houghton & Dutton's day and that no possible comfort for the babies had been forgotten.

"Well," said Mr. McGregor, on his return to the store from the Boat, "Houghton & Dutton have made a good investment today. Their gift is a boost to the glorious work of the Boston Floating Hospital has brought sunshine into the hearts of hundreds."

Children's Laughter for Music.

"Had you music aboard?" asked a friend.

"No," answered Mr. McGregor. Then correcting himself quickly, he said: "Yes, we had music aboard—the sweetest music that ever enlarged man's ear—the music of the laughter of the children."

UNDER BAIL; RUNS HIS CAR

strikers say that the company is losing money at all ends. They say that even the poor receipts from the cars are not being sent their way back to the company, declaring that the strike-breakers know down most of what is taken in. The cost of the men is a day each and all expenses, is another item that the strikers are counting upon as in their favor.

AUTOS TO BE PUT ON.

The automobiles owned by the International Carmen's Association are expected here to-day or to-morrow. The strikers will place the cars on Purchase street and Fall River lines. The big cars, of which seven or eight will be received, will carry forty persons each. They will be operated by experienced chauffeurs, and will do a big business, as the cars, the strikers claim, never make anything near like schedule time.

International Vice-President Sheehan today said: "I can't see how our men can lose this strike here. The people are fine as ever, and they know that there is more to encourage them now than there was even at the beginning. Money, the all needful thing in winning a strike, is coming in in constantly increasing amounts. Labor is scarce and strike breakers are hard to get. Those who are here cannot be depended upon, and the company knows it. I cannot see how the company expects to win. I do not think that it has any show in the world."

WAIT PRESIDENT MAHON.

Strikers' headquarters is crowded today, a very good sign, for there the men are meeting and talking over the situation with each other and making plans. The coming of International President Mahon has lifted everybody with hope. He is the greatest leader the electric car men of America have, and the men here feel that in him they will find a friend to aid unsparingly and successful termination of the strike.

At the mass meeting of the strikers last evening, at which President Thomas W. Kelleher of the Central Labor Union presided, Organizer Fitzgerald, President Cleary of the carmen's Union, William Hall of the Spinners' Union, Benjamin Sherman of the Brickmen's Union and John Ratcliffe of the Weavers' Union made words of encouragement to the men.

Blames Potter for Strike.

Organizer Fitzgerald declared that if President Crapo of the railway company would sign an agreement such as is in effect in Fall River and Brockton, the strike would be over immediately. He put the blame for the strike upon Superintendent Potter of the company, and predicted that within two weeks the company would capitulate.

"ANNEX FLOAT" AT RIVERSIDE

The annual "Annex Float" of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held to-night at the Riverside recreation grounds, Auburndale, under the auspices of the land and water committee of the association. The Boston Y. M. C. A. band and mandolin club will give a concert and has arranged a programme of entertainment.

The Boston Consolidated Gas Company states as its belief that one of the essentials of giving good service to the public as a whole is to provide facilities for the use of gas over as wide a territory as possible, although in many individual instances such service is furnished as a loss. Having this policy in mind, the Consolidated including the year ending June 30, 1906, 163,295 feet of new mains about 30 miles and took up 22,423 feet of mains about 4 miles, making a net gain in mains laid of 80,870 feet in one year, or about 16 miles.

One of the most important reasons for the improvement in the service furnished by the company is the individual complaints. The fact has been frequently demonstrated that almost all the complaints as to quality of service are traceable to local causes such as flaring and choked up burners or imperfectly adjusted gas stoves and defects in the house piping, and the Jobbing Department avoids seeing to most of them. For this branch of the business has received particular attention during the last year, as shown by these figures: During the year ending June 30, 1905, the Jobbing Department executed 175,000 jobs, or an average of over 500 calls for each working day in the year. The number of stove orders executed for the period mentioned was 10,758.

All of this work was done by the Consolidated Gas Co., free of expense to consumers, and, while it increased the distribution expenses of the Company materially for the past year, yet it is believed that the public have appreciated the work done, and consequently the Company thinks that money it cost well invested.

Silent About Pretty Actress Who Won Husband's Love
STEEL KING COREY'S WIFE FREED BY COURT, GETS CUSTODY OF BOY

WOMEN WHO FIGURE IN COREY CASE.

Mabelle Gilman's Name Not Mentioned—Petition Asks Decree on Ground of Desertion.

Respondent's Sister Says Brother Not Fit Person for Custody of 16-Year-Old Son.

RENO, Nev., July 31.—Without reference to the name of Mabelle Gilman, the pretty actress who is said to have won heiress Steel Magnate William Ellis Corey and his wife, the latter was granted a decree from her husband yesterday and the custody of her sixteen-year-old son Allan.

The case was submitted without argument and Mrs. Corey was given the decree on the first ballot by the jury. The successful effort to suppress all mention of Miss Gilman's name and the cause of desertion, as presented by the petitioner as the basis of her action, lends fresh emphasis to the reported deal between Corey and his wife, by which the latter is said to have received $3,000,000 for her petition for absolute separation upon those grounds. It also revived the report, notwithstanding the denial by Corey, that he is soon to marry the actress.

Wife, Freed, Weeps.

Mrs. Corey wept softly when she learned that her petition had been granted, and that she had been given the custody of her boy. A sensation on this part of the arrangement was produced when the respondent's sister, Miss Addie Corey, declared her conviction that her brother was not a proper person to have custody of the child and emphasized this conviction with the vigorous declaration that no wealthy New Yorker was the proper custodian of a youth of Allan's age. She said in this connection:

"I do not consider Mr. Corey a proper person for his son to associate with. He has an home and his associates are not fit companions for a young man of Allan's age. I do not think any New York man is fit to have charge of a boy of his age."

"Do you mean all New York men, miss Corey?"

"I mean wealthy New York men."

Deserted a Year Ago.

Mrs. Corey, in her evidence before the court, gave her residence at Reno, Nev., and said she was married to the respondent in 1893, that they had lived together until May 1, 1905, when he deserted her and went from their home, then in Pittsburg, to New York, and that subsequent efforts at reconciliation had been fruitless. Last May, through her attorneys, she had negotiated a financial settlement with her husband. She was not asked as to the details of this, and offered no information Regarding the deserting she said:

"I followed him to New York and held a conversation with him in the Hotel Lorraine. It was then that he told me that he had decided to live apart. He said that it was impossible for us to live happily together and that I would never see him again. He stated that he intended going to Europe for several months. There was no scene. I talked with him about the matter and tried to again resume our his place in our home, but he refused. I have never seen him since."

COREY SAID TO HAVE PAID WIFE LUMP SUM OF $3,000,000

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The marital troubles of the Coreys, so far as the general public is aware, date from a certain evening six years ago, when William Ellis Corey took in a box in a Pittsburg theatre and saw Mabelle Gilman for the first time.

She was then playing the leading part in "The Medicine Girl," and Corey apparently became enamored of her at first sight. This at least was the declaration of Charles H. Gilman, father of the pretty opera star, who later wrote him a series of letters which have since been called "Mike Gilman's confession."

In the letters it was said that Mike Gilman had prophesied to her parent that she would marry a rich man, and that she would be disenchanted with his marital life. Mr. and Mrs. Gilman took up his native village of Braddock, where he was born forty years ago, and where they had grown up together.

Corey's Early Success.

When Mabelle Gilman appeared in the Pittsburg Theatre on that memorable evening the Coreys were living in fine style in Pittsburg. Young Mr. Corey had followed sharply on the heels of Charles M. Schwab in his advancement. He was liked by Andrew Carnegie, and cemented the admiration of the iron master when he invented the process of reforging armor plate. Corey was president of the Carnegie Steel Company at thirty five. His young son was a boy to him. His home was peaceful. He was comparatively a happy man, and then he went to the theatre and saw Mabelle Gilman.

It was only a day or two later that Mr. Corey, who is an athlete and who promoted a baseball team at his own expense, after he was president of the Steel Trust, took part in a swimming bout in which thirty persons participated in the Pittsburg swimming pool. Miss Gilman was there also. Corey carried off the palm among the swimmers. His achievement excited Miss Gilman's admiration.

Mr. Corey gave Miss Gilman a champagne supper soon after that, at which a few of their mutual friends were present. He took her on automobile rides about the city. His attention became marked. Mrs. Corey heard of it.

But Mrs. Corey took no action then. It was not until long after this that she learned that the actress had a picture of Mr. Corey, elaborately framed, decorating her boudoir in Paris. This was in 1905, and then the rupture between Corey and his wife became complete. Mrs. Corey left her handsome home in Pittsburg, and, with her son went to the home of her mother.

After this came the dinner in New York given by Andrew Carnegie to his thirty fellow partners. At this dinner it was said Mr. Carnegie took President Corey apart and talked to him like a father. While Mr. Carnegie did not admit it, his mediation is said to have brought about the conference in this city between Corey and his wife in December.

At this conference Mrs. Corey received from her husband $3,000,000 in cash and $1,000,000 upon her. She, however, rejected all proposals that did not involve the return of her husband to her. The question was still an open one when Mrs. Corey, on December 26, returned to Braddock and went to the home of her father-in-law.

$3,000,000 For Wife.

It was at this time that Mrs. Corey came out with a public statement that she was the victim of a conspiracy in which her enemies had used her husband to injure her, and she appeared to believe that he was not altogether to blame. It was said that they were to again meet in Pittsburg and be completely reconciled.

This view was dispelled when Mrs. Corey appeared in Reno, Nev., early in the present year. Her husband, contrary to expectations, did not meet her in Pittsburg. She began her suit on June 12 last. Upon motion with it, it is said that Corey set aside $3,000,000 upon his wife outright, on condition that she make desertion her plea in the suit, and that he also promised to provide handsomely for her son.

Another phase of this peculiar marital affair is the report that Mabelle Gilman had agreed to release Mr. Corey from a promise he is alleged to have made to wed her on securing his freedom, and that he in turn, when his wife had received her divorce, marry a New York society woman. Miss Gilman herself, in an interview in Paris not long ago, denied that there was any likelihood of her marrying Mr. Corey.

NO RICH NEW YORK MAN IS FIT GUARDIAN FOR ANY BOY, SAYS STEEL KING'S SISTER

Miss Addie Corey, sister of the steel corporation president, testifying in her sister-in-law's divorce suit at Reno, Nev., yesterday, was asked:

"Do you consider Mr. Corey a proper custodian for his son?"

"I do not," was the reply. "His associates are not fit companions for a young man of Allan's age. I do not think any New York man is fit to have charge of a boy of his age."

"Do you mean ALL New York men, Miss Corey?"

"I mean all wealthy New York men."

DID NOT LEAVE DOG TO STARVE

Misinformation from an official source has been given out in Washington that the BOSTON AMERICAN of July 20 to the effect that a little bull terrier owned by Lieut. W. R. Holland of No. 19 Alden street, Somerville, was starving to death because the Holland family had gone on vacation, leaving the dog a prisoner in the house.

The BOSTON AMERICAN regrets that through no fault of its own an injustice was done to Mr. Holland and his family. The facts are that on the day in question Mrs. Holland went on her vacation, but the dog, a family pet, by the way, named "Major," was left alone in the house for only two hours.

So far from seeking to starve the dog, the Hollands are more liable to stand in the little fellow's digestive organs by overfeeding, for among other dainties served to "Major" is an occasional spread of home-made pie. This is no reflection on the bis

PHILLIPS ON JURY RACK IN FENWAY PROBE

Deputy Superintendent of Sewers When Notorious Contracts Were Awarded.

SIMON DONOVAN WAITS

George Phillips, deputy superintendent of sewers in the Boston street department when the notorious Fenway contracts were given out, was a witness before the Suffolk County Grand Jury today, and had a mass of figures to explain.

It is alleged by prominent citizens that the city of Boston has been swindled out of hundreds of thousands of dollars through Fenway work. When Alderman Whelton was Acting Mayor last year he had United States District Attorney French, as special counsel, make an investigation into the work done by contractors there.

Awaiting, it is believed, his summons before the Grand Jury, Simon Donovan, one of the leading contractors in Boston, sat in District Attorney John B. Moran's office. Just when he will be called to testify as to Fenway work is a question which District Attorney Moran will not answer.

It was stated in his office that it is believed that the Grand Jury will finish hearing evidence on the Fenway graft charges today and the pending or refused prosecutors into the doings of the Ice Trust will be taken up next.

As a result of the investigation going on at present it is believed that the next Grand Jury report will be the most sensational ever rendered in Suffolk county. There is said to be deep apprehension as to what the findings will be on the part of a number of rich and powerful Bostonians.

District Attorney Moran has promised to spare no one at whom the finger of incriminating evidence points.

WOBURN TO VOTE FOR CITY LIGHT PLANT

Municipal Ownership Sentiment Expected to Win at Coming Election.

Woburn citizens expect that they will have a chance to vote at the coming election in favor of a municipal lighting plant, for an order in approval passed the Board of Aldermen a year ago and has just gone through to a second reading for this year. It must be passed by the City Council two successive years before the people can vote upon the question. Public sentiment is so strong in favor of this public advancement that there is little doubt as to the verdict citizens will render at the polls.

Prior to the action of the aldermen last evening the special committee rendered a report which was read by Alderman James H. Connolly, on behalf of himself and Aldermen Buchanan and Loughlin. He is one of the foremost fighters in Woburn for municipal ownership, and the report contained the valuable information on the question of that city owning a municipal lighting plant which the committee gathered in a long and thorough investigation.

Report Scores Corporations.

The report is in favor of "the city of Woburn adopting the system successfully carried out in other cities and towns in Massachusetts and emancipating herself from the control of corporations and private commercial dictation; that is, the owning and operating of her own municipal lighting plant."

The report refers to legislative corruption which has betrayed the public interests for the benefit of corporations in these scathing words:

"All over the country there is a determination, by one method or another, to bring under more immediate control of the people all great public utilities and to eliminate all of the disreputable element and public vampires who have preyed upon the body politic for so long a period and with such unquestioned success in our public and commercial institutions.

"The whole purpose of the creation of these representatives to the various general Courts of the nation, and in this state in many instances been signally deceived and their confidence betrayed by the violations of the public assurances and by the perfection of personal integrity of those whom they selected to represent them is beyond contravention.

Public Sentiment Defied.

"The arrogant insolence, arrogance and utter defiance of public sentiment and civic rights by many of the great corporations and syndicates in existence at the present time is accounted for by the pertinent fact that certain laws placed upon the statute books of various Commonwealths and which fortified these capitalists in an impregnable position of assurance, were invented and formulated by them and enacted through the perfidy and infamy of purchased legislators whom they owned.

"Upon those political apostates who made such laws a possibility, the mantle of Iscariot would be surely more appropriate and becoming garment than the robe of state with which they were invested by a confiding constituency."

BONES LEAD TO MURDER TALE AND MYSTERY

A skeleton which Dr. Francis E. Park left to the old Blake house at South Boston when he moved away years ago furnished a sensation for awhile yesterday, when it was discovered by a boy who immediately connected the story of a terrible tragedy. The boy had been rummaging through the unoccupied house and discovered the bones in a box.

Soon two thousand people filled the street in front of the house and the police had difficulty in keeping them in order.

Miss Park, who now lives on Broadway, near F street, was sent for and when she arrived declared that her brother, while studying medicine, bought some skeletons and when he was through with them he threw them into a box, which he put up in the garret and there they have remained more than a quarter of a century.

DEATH ANGEL WAITS TO WRITE FINIS TO LAST CHAPTER OF ROMANTIC LIFE

GARLAND NURSED BY WIFE, LOST AND WON AGAIN

Divorced Once by Human Law, Only to Be Reunited by Love of Their Little Ones; Now to Be Divorced by Death.

Chapter I.

Well Mated, Said Mrs. Grundy.

GAY "JIMMY GARLAND" was just out of Harvard.

In the morning of his manhood the future dawned smiling and rosy.

He was a good looking young fellow, dashing, debonair, rugged in health, vigorous of brain and absolute master of Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars.

And so when in September, 1902, he sealed his early love promise to Marie Louise Tudor of Brookline by making her his wife, many a poor girl envied the bride.

SCENE AT GARLAND'S BEDSIDE.

She was lovely and lovable and just twenty-two. Tradition said that the purple blood of the royal Tudors of England flowed in her veins.

For fine and fearless, the wedding in St. Paul's Episcopal church broke the records of a generation.

And when all the excitement was over and "Jimmy" Garland and his bride were sailing for Europe on their honeymoon, even garrulous Mrs. Grundy, who is no virtuously sparing of compliments even fault finding, scandal scenting, libel smashing Mrs. Grundy remarked what a well mated young couple the Garlands seemed to be.

Chapter II.

Barrels of Money to Spend.

HOME again from Europe, "Jimmy" Garland and his pretty wife promptly settled down to the restless, nerve taxing life of ambitious young society people with barrels of money to spend and plenty of time on their hands to spend it.

What a wonderful lullaby is cash!

Soon the Garlands became leaders in the charmed circle of New England's most exclusive arbiters of fashion.

Even Mrs. Grundy said their entertainments were princely and acclaimed the young matron as the most charming of hostesses hereabouts.

Chapter III.

Pangs Concealed Under Mask.

BABIES—four of them, all boys—came in lively procession to bless the Garland home and fill it with noise.

Everybody, except the servants, pictured the Garlands as leading an idyllic sort of life.

Inquisitive Mrs. Grundy, who claims to be able to fathom everybody's private business, had almost decided that they were the happiest young couple in New England, when rumors of trouble in the domestic sphere began to be whispered abroad.

Distorted, of course, is the repetition, these rumors were in substance correct.

Unconsciously, the Garlands had been playing a part.

Under a mask of mutual affection and an indifference to cheap gossip, they had been concealing, even from their closest friends, those lacerating pangs that spring come to all husbands and wives over whom jealousy has cast its malignant spell.

Chapter IV.

Then Came Divorce Battle.

SOON the mask was thrown off.

In 1900 the Garlands quarreled, separated and were reconciled. Then they quarreled, separated and came together again.

Enlightened Mrs. Grundy, who always finds secret pleasure in the misfortunes of her friends, followed the personal panorama with a feverish interest that would not permit her to see the signs of dissension, putting this and that together and wondering when, where and how this particular comedy of errors would develop into tragedy.

In 1902 the scene was a stormy scene at the Garland Summer home in Hamilton. Husband and wife again parted. Society took sides.

Some said Garland was to blame, and they pointed to New York city as the scene of alleged infidelities and intrigues.

Others blamed the wife.

Mrs. Grundy blamed them both.

First gun in a legal battle was fired next Spring by angry Mrs. Garland who commenced an action for divorce. A cross libel was filed by Garland.

Chapter V.

Whole Household Testifies.

IT WAS the most sensational divorce case ever tried in Salem.

Private detectives, coachmen, valets, waiters, housemaids, housekeepers, stenographers, bellboys and elevator men—these and others were put on the stand and asked to tell what they knew about the domestic affairs of the Garlands.

Bitterness and recrimination issued free by from both sides.

Mrs. Garland alleged cruel and abusive treatment in addition to disloyalty.

In his counter charges, Mr. Garland named J. De Forest Danielson, a millionaire.

Chapter VI.

$15,000 a Year Alimony.

OVERSHADOWING all other conspicuous features of the trial were Danielson's impassioned love letters to Mrs. Garland. Here is one of them:

"My own——I don't want you to think that I am trying to draw you into breaking your promise to him. Every word in your letter stirred and affected every fiber of my body.

"My dear, dear love, you cannot think what longings were stirred in me and what recklessness was mine.

"It seemed impossible to go any where but come straight to you and tell you that it was impossible to live anywhere except with you, regardless of what the consequences might be.

"I had hoped that when you went from me it would be less hard and that by my not hearing from you other things might take your place.

"I love you, my own. You know that I shall always love you. Last night my soul would have been eagerly bartered for one look, one word from you."

The dejected author of this heavy heart throb failed to give Mrs. Garland the moral support of his presence at the trial. In fact, he went off to Europe and remained there until the most threatening of the storm clouds had cleared away.

Unconsciously, the combining cablegram was presented to prove that gay Mr. Garland had not lived up to his marriage vows.

The Judge's verdict exonerated the wife and granted to Mrs. Garland, the children and $15,000 a year alimony.

Chapter VII.

On a Second Honeymoon.

FROM the leaden atmosphere of Salem's divorce court let us pass quickly to the life-giving breezes of Bristol Bay.

One sunny afternoon in August, 1904, the steam yacht Barracouta, owner James A. Garland, sailed out of the bay for a cruise, destination unknown.

Speck and span as the sailors could make her and with all her bunting flashing, the Barracouta steamed majestically away, while her happy owner and a sailing party lunched on the deck side by side. Very pretty little boys frolicked around them.

The woman was Marie Louise Tudor Garland—no longer a divorced wife, but a bride on her second honeymoon.

She and her first love had been married that very morning.

The second ceremony was as simple as the first had been pompous.

In the humble parsonage of Bristol's Methodist church a country minister had reunited the bonds which a divorce court pledge had dissolved.

Just a plain, plodding man was this minister. He had never read the society columns of the newspapers, never suspected that a prominent part he was playing in a romance that stunned America's smart set, never heard of the parties before, but guessed they were persons of some consequence on account of the size of his fee.

Chapter VIII.

Kept as One by Children.

DISGRUNTLED Mrs. Grundy never could understand how proud Mrs. Garland came to bury the hatchet.

What! And she professing to be a real Tudor with the blood of haughty English kings in her veins? How was it possible? How could she ever stoop to kiss and make up and forget and forgive all the horrid things that "Jimmy's" lawyers had brought out at the divorce trial?

Mrs. Grundy forgot the children.

She might have remembered what too many seem to forget—that love, the woman made one in the best of a child's heart can never be hopelessly estranged.

Chapter IX.

Faithful Through Sickness.

FROM Prudence Island in Narragansett Bay word reached Boston early this month that pneumonia had stricken down "Jimmy" Garland in his beautiful Summer home, and that his distressed wife, more devoted to him than ever, was almost constantly at his bedside trying to nurse him back to health.

Later came word that the patient had been removed to a sanatorium in Providence, and that distracted Mrs. Garland insisted on accompanying him there.

Today comes this message to the BOSTON AMERICAN from Dr. A. Vernon Briggs, the Garland family physician:

"Mr. Garland will die. There is absolutely no hope for his recovery. Death is only a matter of time. I cannot say just how long he will live, perhaps a day, possibly a little longer. Mrs. Garland, faithful to the end, remains at his bedside constantly, never leaving the room, and almost exhausted from loss of sleep."

Chapter X.

To Be Divorced by Death.

AND now that the cold fingers of death are about to write the closing chapter of poor "Jimmy" Garland's romance, sympathetic eyes turn to the little cottage in Hanover, where imploring fate has cast a cruel around and fallen on two troubled lives, determined to divorce them again.

Sympathetic eyes can see from afar a pale wasted, dying man and a white faced watching angel kneeling at his bedside.

The old, old love light dances in his eyes.

Tears are dimmed with tears.

From afar sympathetic ears can hear the sweet song of Love overland and the answering sob of his wife.

Chapter XI.

To Wait Third Coming.

FOR those of us who believe that death is but a lowering of the lights, a darkening of the stage while the scenes are shifted that another act may begin in some happier world under a fairer sky—for those who believe that way it will require no great flight of the imagination, when both has done his work, to open wide the silent wrought gates of Shadowland and see James A. Garland standing there—standing there impatiently standing with outstretched arms in the twilight of the Great Unknown, waiting for the third and final coming of his bride.

Chances Against Him.

Dr. H. W. Jackson of Boston has been frequently called in consultation over the case of James A. Garland, the Boston and Newport millionaire. The patient is regarded as very critically ill, with the chances, according to the doctors, against his recovery.

ROCKEFELLER IN OHIO TO FACE PROSECUTION

CLEVELAND O., July 31. J. D. Rockefeller and party arrived over the Lake Shore at 7:30 a. m. The oil magnate was immediately driven to his Summer home at Forest Hill.

"I hope the time will come when some of the people will know others of the people better. You newspaper men can do much toward making some of us better acquainted with the others. You can tell what kind of people we are. I believe it is the duty of the papers to do this."

This was the text of John D. Rockefellers remarks as he sped on the Lake Shore Railroad limited and Cleveland this morning.

The Rockefeller party consisted of the oil magnate, his wife, and Miss Adams, his secretary. Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller had a stateroom in a Pullman sleeper.

The merry twinkle in his eye, the tanned skin and the cheeks bulging with plumpness told the story of a healthy man. Rockefeller's word corroborated his looks. He said he never felt better in his life.

Glad to Get Home Again.

"It is good to get home again, for Cleveland is my home. It you don't think it is a pleasure to be here, go to another country for a time. Our own country is the best, though we can and make great improvements in the conditions here. We can study out our own conditions to good advantage. Is Cleveland prospering as much as ever?"

He was told it was.

To the visits of Cleveland business men and of newspaper journalists of the country set Forest Hill last Summer Rockefeller referred.

"It was one of the greatest pleasures of my life," said he.

"Will I have my friends come again? It's a little early to say. I'll think it over. I had to close the park at Forest Hill to the public on account of a few mad(?) people early. Perhaps I will open it again some day, when the people get to know better the kind of man I am.

His face was serious. His eyes were looking recently into space. There seemed to be running through his mind the pleasures of himself as the public has seen him in the past and as he would like to be represented to them.

Hopes They Know Him Better.

Speaking of newspaper interviews, he said:

"You get to know me better, boys. You see what kind of a man I am."

His face beamed with good nature and kindness at that moment. He seemed anxious that his interviewers should think well of him. He made the statements which were the text of his entire talk.

"I hope the time will come when some of the people will know others of the people better."

The Oil King comes to face prosecution as the head of the Standard Oil Company for alleged violation of the Valentine Anti Trust Law of 1898.

The presence of Mr. Rockefeller, whom ever wanted to the court, has been pledged by the Standard Oil attorneys to avoid the arrest of the multi millionaire on the warrant which was placed in the hands of Sheriff Groves of Hancock County.

FEAR OF MORAN KEEPS DRAPER HEAD OF BOARD

This Is What Prevents Him From Resigning in Favor of Cauley, as Agreed.

HAVE GRAND JURY IN MIND

The reason why Chairman Charles M. Draper of the Board of Aldermen, has not resigned his place in favor of Edward J. Cauley, as was agreed upon when the Board was deadlocked, in order to escape Alderman Moran, according to many in political circles.

Mr. Moran has got the aldermanic members of the Board in such a position that they are afraid to make the move that was to take place at this time, and one man who is close to the officials at City Hall said: "Although the matter was taken up by the Grand Jury, and nothing came of it, the scare was such that the Aldermen don't want to take any chances of having it come up again."

Heavy Penalty, Said Moran.

"I intend to get to the bottom of this matter, and those who 'go on the jag,' said District Attorney Moran when he first took hold of the report that the chairman had been elected by a deal between Republicans and Democrats, at which masked cards figured in the Mayor's office.

"I want to find out if there was a compact agreed upon whereby a compromise was effected between the opposing aldermen in exchange for future considerations and promises. If such was agreed upon, why the law is very explicit upon such matters, and covers it completely. There is also a heavy penalty for such a violation of the statutes."

Don't Care to Take the Risk.

With these words of the district attorney remembered the members of the Board of Aldermen feel that perhaps it would be well for them not to take any chances. Mr. Draper was supposed to resign as chairman last night. He didn't do it. Alderman Cauley was to be elected chairman. Mr. Cauley refuses to say what he intends to do about the matter. He won't talk at all. It is said that Mr. Cauley doesn't care to run any risk any more than the present chairman does.

There the matter stands at present with the odds in favor of Alderman Draper remaining chairman of the board for the rest of the year.

I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. "FAIR COUNT, INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE SLOGAN

New York State Committee Meets To-day to Plan for Anti-Boss Campaign.

ASK HEARST TO LEAD

NEW YORK, July 31.—The Independence League campaign to redeem the State from bosism, trusts and a debauched ballot received a great impetus to-day, when the recently elected State Committee gathered at the Gilsey House for its initial meeting.

The advance guard of the 150 committeemen that came to town last night declared with unanimity that William Randolph Hearst must head the State ticket, that he must be nominated for Governor at the State Convention—the place and date for which are to be fixed to-day—and that the paramount issue of the canvass shall be: "An honest ballot and a fair count."

All other considerations are but slight if in the determination to put a ticket in the field whose election would end bossism, curb the trusts and make it certain that when a man voted, his ballot should be counted as cast.

Steuben Is for Hearst.

Committeeman Reuben B. Lyon of the First Steuben district, said: "There is a political revolution in the interior of the State. It has manifested itself particularly since the recent New York City Mayoralty election.

"In Steuben, my home county, and other adjacent counties, powerful Independence League organizations have been formed. They are made up of Republicans and Democrats who no longer have confidence in the party machines, which they have hitherto followed, and who are delighted to break away and join a people's movement for the crushing of them both.

"I believe that Mr. Hearst can carry the rock-ribbed Republican county of Steuben at the head of an independent ticket. That the Democrats of Steuben also want him is clear, when I say that former chairman of the Democratic State Committee, Frank Campbell, who has controlled the delegates from the county for a decade, has declared for Hearst and insists that he be the Democratic candidate for Governor as well."

Revolt in Central Counties.

Committeeman C. L. Bennett of Madison said: "I have been president of the State Hop Growers Association for years. No one who witnessed the reception given to Judge Seabury by 15,000 members, their wives and children, at Sylvan Beach last Saturday, when the judge proclaimed that Mr. Hearst would lead the people to victory this Fall, could doubt that the sentiment of the voters of central New York is overwhelmingly for Hearst and the Independence League principles. I predict that if Mr. Hearst is nominated for Governor Madison will break away from its Republican moorings and give the Independence League candidate for Governor a fine plurality."

ZIONIST CASH FOR PALESTINE

Collections begin to-day among the Zionists of the big Jewish organization, for the purpose of providing means for purchase of land in Palestine and Syria, which shall belong to the Jewish people in common.

It was originally intended that no part of this fund should be used until $1,000,000 had been collected, but it has since been decided that, pending the grant of a charter from the Sultan of Turkey, one-half of the money collected during any one year might be used for the purchase of additional land in Palestine or in the neighboring countries.

Local contributions are to be sent to Rabbi M. M. Eichorn, No. 32 Stedman street, Brookline.

SCHOONER FULL OF LIQUOR; SEIZED

ROCKLAND, Me., July 31. The largest seizure of liquors for years was made here yesterday by Sturgis deputies. H. Herbert and W. J. Fernald, who secured eleven barrels of bottled whisky and thirty cases of miscellaneous liquors from the five masted schooner Hastings, which was tied up at a wharf. Captain William Kelbelt, her commander, was arrested.

GIRL ASKS COURT TO TAKE HER AWAY FROM FATHER

ANNIE OVERDUNKER

GIRL WHO WANTS TO BE TAKEN FROM HOME.

Motherless Child Tells Pathetic Story in Lynn Police Court.

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, July 31. Pretty, blue-eyed, four teen year-old Annie Overdunker is at the Central Police Station to-day, where she came voluntarily, asking that Judge John W. Berry of the Lynn Police Court take her away from her home. The girl goes before Judge Berry to-day, when some disposition of the girl's case will be made.

The girl was brought before the Court on June 6 last, charged with stealing a watch. Her story told to the judge on that day was a pathetic one. Annie's mother died, her father, John Overdunker, lives at No. 55 Sunnyside street, Hyde Park. Before the mother died she told the girl that the mother's watch would some day belong to her. After the mother's death the watch was stolen from the home in Hyde Park. One day in Lynn she saw a watch which looked like the one belonging to her mother. She took it. In a fit of remorse she threw the watch away.

Judge Berry listened to her story. Mrs. Edward J. Clough of Hyde Park told the court she was willing to adopt the child. The girl was sent to the Clough home.

There she remained for a few weeks. Influence was brought to bear upon her, and she returned to her father's home. Last night she came to the Central Police Station, said that she had been brutally treated at home and asked for protection.

She spent the night in the police matron's room at the station, and will go before the court to-day.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND SURE IN FIVE YEARS

Rev. P. J. Lally of Galway Says Conditions Are Greatly Changed.

IS ABUNDANCE OF MONEY

The Very Rev. P. J. Lally of Galway and Lieutenant-Colonel M. C. Hackett of Dublin, Ireland, who are visiting through this country in the interests of the international exhibition which is to be held in Dublin next year, are at present in Boston and are stopping at Young's Hotel. Father Lally and Colonel Hackett are particularly interested in that part of the exhibition which will be known as the historical collection. It is their mission to see all the prominent people here who are either Irish or of Irish extraction and obtain from them relics of all descriptions to be displayed at the exhibition.

While Father Lally is one of the most widely known Catholic clergymen in Ireland and other countries, this is his first visit to America. He was a great friend of the late Charles Stewart Parnell and is one of the greatest champions of the cause of Ireland in the world. In talking to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Father Lally said:

"I feel sure that within or by the end of five years Ireland will be granted home rule. Our people are the most patient in the world, and no country on the face of the globe can boast of more loyal sons and daughters. We have had to surmount all kinds of obstacles in the shape of famine and internal dissensions and are now willing to go through the same ordeal if in the end we can only secure that freedom for which we have been striving so long.

Appreciate Support Here.

"The Irish in America have always stood nobly by us. Never for a minute do they forget the land of their forefathers, and for this Ireland is grateful. The day will come when my country will be able to show how deeply it appreciates the support received from the sons and daughters of exiled Irishmen.

"There is an abundance of wealth in Ireland, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding, but a lack of confidence on the part of the money men has held back the growth of its industries, and it is principally to show these people of money why they should have confidence in their own resources that we undertook the coming exhibition.

"Every corner of Ireland is interested in the international exhibition which is to be held in Dublin next year, and I do not hesitate to say that it will be one of the greatest events in Ireland's history. Colonel Hackett and myself are the American representatives and are now busily engaged in the interest of the historical collection, which will form a very important part of the exhibition of 1907, and we have met with a reception in every city which we have visited that we will not soon forget. One of our principal aims is to have the Irish men and sons of eminence and scores from them the mementoes of those who helped make America what it is to-day, relics such as swords, letters, documents and the like. These we intend to place in one of the most prominent places in the exhibition.

Over $720,000 Subscribed.

"Commissioners will be sent to Spain, Italy, and in fact to every part of the globe to secure such relics as they can to make the historical part of the exhibition one of the grandest ever witnessed in the world.

"The business men of Ireland, representing every kind of politics and religion, have entered into the exhibition with the greatest interest, and have already subscribed over $720,000.

"We were afraid at first that an international exhibition would tend to introduce the foreign made article at the expense of the home made goods, but after discussing the matter thoroughly we came to the conclusion that such would not be the case and we went ahead. People of all classes of religion and politics were placed upon the committee.

"The conditions of Ireland are far different from what they were ten years ago, and to prove this I might say that in my own town, once a few years ago, marble and granite polishing was introduced, only a few needle found employment, while to-day hundreds of them are working. That, coupled with the fact that now Galway granite is being used in England and Scotland in preference to any other.

Emigration a Bare.

"The one bane of our existence, however, is the emigration to this and other countries. While we know they are leaving us every day, as yet we are powerless to prevent them because we have not enough inducements to offer them to remain at home. We want them to stay at home. We want to be able to give them employment and we want to reach them modern methods, and the $720,000 which has been subscribed in addition will go a long way in that direction.

"Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia received us with open arms and has consented to act on the committee from that city, and it is our earnest hope to be able to secure the service and co-operation of the Mayors of all the other cities in this country.

"Our work has so far met with the greatest success, and Colonel Hackett and myself cannot say half enough for your kindly country. Although this is my first visit to this side, I promise you that it will not be my last one. All I have read and heard of this country only gives me a very small idea of its beauties, its great buildings and its great-hearted people."

47 DAYS

have elapsed since the BOSTON AMERICAN filed with the Attorney-General a formal information and petition that he bring suit to force the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Albany Railroad to obey the law and to abandon the competing trolley lines which they have illegally acquired.

Why does the Attorney-General delay?

GIRL DIVED; FAILED TO COME UP ALIVE

WOODBRIDGE, Vt., July 31.—Helen Tomlinson, aged twenty-four, of Black Rock, N. Y., while bathing yesterday dived from a boat but failed to come to the surface and her companions were unable to recover the body until four hours afterward. It is thought she struck her head on a rock at the bottom of the pond.

MAY SUTTON SAILS FOR HOME AUG. 10

LONDON, July 31. Miss May Sutton, the American woman lawn tennis champion, will sail for New York on the White Star liner Cedric on August 10. A rumor that she was engaged to be married was denied to-day.

UNNUMBERED AUTO SCARES GLOUCESTER

GLOUCESTER, July 31.—An auto ran through Main street at terrific speed, estimated to be about a mile a minute, yesterday. Pedestrians fled to stores at its approach.

Fortunately no teams were hit. The men returned at the same breakneck speed. No number was on the machine.

SURE GIRL IN MOTOR BOAT WAS SLAIN

Monday morning. I'm sure. I thought fishing would be good, so I got out a hook and line.

Clothes Were About the Head.

"It was about noon, I guess, when I first saw the body. It was out in the middle of the river, and at first I thought it was a wax figure. I thought maybe some boys were playing a joke on me.

"Then I watched it closely. The hips were down low in the water. She had on a dark gray skirt and a light waist. The skirt and dress were thrown back and only the underclothing covered the body.

"I remember I thought that was funny. Usually water don't do that. Clothes straighten out in the water.

"I saw the face and it was all shiny and the hair was puffed out. I'm sure it was Clara Braley."

Mr. Clements identified Miss Braley's photograph as that of the dead girl.

Among the thirty witnesses summoned, Gladys B. Batchelder, Clara's aunt, and Morris M. Batchelder, her grandmother, and Edwin F. Braley, her father, testified, each declaring that the girl was happy and cheerful and had no sweetheart. Each was certain that she did not take her own life but was murdered.

Saw Man Bend Over Woman.

N. E. Turgin, the upholsterer, for whom George Trumbull formerly worked, was an important witness. He told the facts of the interview with Trumbull and of the mysterious launch on the river Sunday night.

"I was sitting on the verandah," he said, "I heard a motor boat come whizzing past. There was a loud exhaust. That is what first directed my attention. I was watching it and it went down toward the lower bridge.

"Just as it got in the glare of the electric light I saw a man bend over toward a woman. She screamed and the man caught her by the neck. That was all I heard or saw. In a minute the launch was in the darkness again and I didn't see or hear anything else."

Harold Page and Miss Margie Cook testified that they were out on the river Sunday night, but saw no other launch or power boat of any kind and that they had heard no screams.

Chum Convinced of Murder.

Gladys W. Batchelder, the eighteen-year-old aunt and chum of the dead girl, nearly fainted when she told of Clara's cheerful disposition, how she had no lovers nor sweethearts, how George Trumbull had forced attentions on her and how she had flouted him.

"She was murdered. She was murdered," the girl-aunt hysterically cried as she left the stand. "She didn't kill herself. A man did it. He murdered her."

Mrs. Belmont Vision in White on Her 'Dog Walks'

Snapshot taken for the Boston American.

MRS. BELMONT EXERCISING HER DOGS.

Newport Society Leader a Striking Figure During Her Morning Strolls with Two French Bulldogs.

For these "dog walks" Mrs. Belmont dresses quite simply, for a Newport society leader. She wears a white canvas skirt, a short white skirt with just clears the ground, a white waist and embroidered collar, and a white hat with a white veil, a broad black belt relieves the general white effect.

The two French bulldogs are among Mrs. Belmont's dearest possessions. She likes a good dog as much as a man does and is noted for her discriminating taste in thoroughbreds. Since the French bulldog with his old but ears came to be a society fashionable in Boston, Mrs. Belmont has had one or more of them about her Newport grounds.

She usually goes out with two, one lead in a leash and the other following without a leash. On these walks Mrs. Belmont stops along smartly keeping up with the lively dog trot of her pets.

HISS SLEUTHS WHO REVEAL HARTJE PLOTS

Detectives Who Opened Trunks and Stole Letters Testify in Divorce Case.

POLICE PROTECT THEM

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 31. Augustus Hartje, who is suing his wife for divorce, yesterday got his courage up to the point of putting on the witness stand the two detectives who declare that they stole Mrs. Hartje's love letters from the trunk of Tom Madine, the coachman, who is named as corespondent.

A great deal of evidence has been produced to show that the only letters taken from Madine's trunk were trick notes sent to him by a woman stenographer. It is alleged that in this way envelopes were obtained for the bogus love letters addressed to Mrs. Hartje.

The intense feeling against the detectives who are alleged to have participated in this plot was shown by the hisses and groans in the courtroom as they were testifying, and when court adjourned the street was almost lynch-inside.

Threats had been made of an attack on the detectives and a detail of city police was sent to preserve order.

John R. Staub and John A. Alexander are the names of the detectives. Staub has been known in the case as "Craig." Staub swore that on two occasions he opened Madine's trunk at the house in which the coachman rented. On the second occasion Anderson was with him.

MISS GOULD TO HELP MRS. SAGE GIVE MILLIONS

Financier's Widow Plans to Distribute $10,000,000 to Charity

HEIRS POSTPONE FIGHT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 31. It is stated that Mrs. Russell Sage would distribute $10,000,000 in the near future. The announcement which came from a seemingly authentic source.

It is stated that Miss Gould will give away the money as a tribute to her friend and counsellor in many business enterprises, Mrs. Sage having returned from Europe.

Miss Gould has advised with Mrs. Sage many times in matters of philanthropy, and the report that the two women have been in hand in hand in parting millions to the benefit of mankind.

Associated in Charity.

Many who heard the report received the fact that Miss Gould and Mrs. Sage are as closely associated in charitable work as were Russell Sage and Gould in finance.

Nephews and nieces of Mrs. Sage, to whom the news was carried, declared that it probably was true. They refused to believe that Mrs. Sage had given away $10,000,000 before her own death was probated. It is known that during his lifetime Mr. Sage gave away a large sum of money.

It is now said, however, that the Sage relatives have no intention of contesting the will at present, and that no attempt will be made to have the estate administered by the courts so that the heirs may obtain possession of the money.

To Waive Citations.

Then, and after the $25,000 allotted to each of the legatees will be given outright, organizing an association to which the purpose of raising funds to carry on an action in the Supreme Court to set aside the will.

That is the programme planned by certain relatives of Mr. Sage who are not satisfied with a $75,000 legacy. They have hinted that if Mrs. Sage volunteers to give an additional $25,000 to each nephew and niece there will be no legal fight, for the attorneys for the executors are said to be in favor of making any such settlement.

CHARGES COLLIN BOY WITH STUBBORNNESS

The Newton police have received word from John Collins of Woonsocket, father of Malcolm R. For Honor of Dying First on NEW GALLOWS

PITTSBURG, July 31. Bat Williams and Cornelius Combs, two colored murderers who are to be hanged here September 6, to-day agreed that they would shoot "craps" for the honor of dedicating the new scaffold.

There is no double scaffold in the local jail, and both prisoners sent word they would like to try out the gallows first. Sheriff Dickson, a well-known sport and wing shot, sent word to the condemned men that he would not decide for them, but that they might settle it for themselves. He has agreed to referee the crap game.

PACKED HOUSES GREET LILLIAN LAWRENCE

Popular Actress Returns to Globe Theatre in "Scrap of Paper."

HAS TO MAKE A SPEECH

Lillian Lawrence returned to her own town, Boston yesterday, and two immense houses at the Globe Theatre were made her debut from the Pacific with cheers, applause, flowers and encores. In fact, she was the feature of the play, Sardou's "A Scrap of Paper," although John Craig was warmly applauded for his easy facility and clever work as Prosper Couramont.

Miss Lawrence played Suzanne with all her old-time enthusiasm, and had to make a little speech in response to the enthusiasm of the "out front." Mary Sanders and William Humphrey, William Evarts and Frances Mackenzie were well cast, and each developed every bit of the humor of the situations. The stage settings were unusually good.

ALL VARIETY AT KEITH'S

"All variety" is again the feature of the Keith Theatre program this week, and it is not the conventional variety, either. The leader this week is Harry Davenport, who presents vocal specialties called "English Types," including the famous and popular "Pay Bazaar." In which the actor takes off a clergyman surrounded by the women of his parish.

There are two other headliners, the Rappo Sisters, very, very lively Russian character dancers, and Saul Allgrad, one of the most skilful equilibrists in the business. The comedy section includes the George Reno troupe of acrobats, Stinson and Merton, Flo Adler, singer of popular songs; Jean Ardelle, with four "pickaninnies"; Jordan and Harvey, Hebrew comedians; Goets and Nelson, jugglers on revolving globes, and Henry and Francis in a comedy skit. The Fadettes played their usual program of popular music, and the kinetograph has a fine list of new moving pictures, including the coronation and attempted assassination of King Alfonso of Spain.

PIRATES OF PENZANCE HAS SNAP AND DASH

Despite the sultry weather, a crowded house attended the "Pirates of Penzance" at the Castle Square Theatre last evening. The performance moved with snap and dash, and the audience was out at an unusually early hour for a first performance. The several parts were capitally awarded, each member enacting a role that suited him or her. The lyrics are just as bright and witty as ever and have a rythm and swing to them delightful to the ear in these days when the jingle of verse depends words together in a haphazard fashion. The music, which is ever popular, is well interpreted by the splendid Castle Square Opera Company. Frederic, the hero of the evening was scored by George Shields, as the humorous sergeant of police. In this character Mr. Shields had opportunity to display his ability in a comic role, and to say that he convulsed the audience does not be putting it too strong. The "Paradise" number received several encores, and H. Thayer's difficult song, "I Am the Very Pattern of a Modern Major General" was excellently done. The rest of the company were seen to good advantage, chorus showed careful training, and scenically the opera is perfect.

WONDERLAND HAS BIGGEST BALLOON

Largest balloon ever made for exhibition purposes has been constructed at Wonderland, and naturally was named "The Boston American." It measures 165 feet 6 inches high, 165 feet 6 inches wide, and, like the AMERICAN, is going higher. This afternoon at 5 o'clock, "Happy" Campbell will rise from the Wonderland baseball plaza and descend by a double parachute drop. Knowlton, Scientific wonder, bicyclist, performs the perilous feat of shooting the chutes on her bicycle, and on the circus arena this week Prince, the pony, comedy dog, assisted by Bird, the trick dog; Tip Top Four, in their thrilling high stilts, and the Salem Cadet band concerts are as popular as ever. The big restaurant is one of the real hits of Wonderland. The free show features, such as Fighting the Flames, Hell Gate, Thompson's Scenic Railway, Kennedy's Wild West, Princess Trixie, Love's Journey, Trip to Japan, Dante's Inferno, Trip to Jupiter, Hale's Tours and "South Before the War," are also big crowds. The latter have new artists and a complete orchestra as added attractions.

Tremont Theatre

"The Man from Now," with Harry Bulger as the star, at the Tremont Theatre last evening began its fourth week. "The Man from Now" is the best musical comedy its well-known authors have written, and next Thursday will mark the seventy-fifth performance here. It will certainly be the century mark before leaving for the New York run at the New Amsterdam Theatre.

Palace Theatre

The bill at the Palace Theatre is bright and lively this week. The first strength of the stock company is introduced in two amusing burlesques entitled "The Grafters" and "Doping the Winner." A satire on scenes at the race course and pandemonium among absentminded professors Brooks and Jeannette in a comedy sketch, Charles Farrell, the old "Rube" coon; Freeman and Watson, rapid-fire conversation; the Holman brothers, comedy acrobats, and the Palacescope with new moving pictures.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

Charlotte Hunt has made a distinct success as the Minister's Daughter in the drama of that name, this week's offering at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. Gertrude Hillman also is worthy in the opposite role. Lavie and Adrienne parted company after they were mixed in the story, and "The Minister's Daughter" is the best of the season's successes.

Austin & Stone's Museum

All West End streets yesterday led to Austin & Stone's Museum, where Sig. Jou Vino's troupe of Comedoons was the "big casino" of the splendid program. For half an hour nine times during the day they entertained with fascinating dancing, including the national Tarrantelle dances and classical selections of a high order. With them was dainty Senorita Lola de Cuba, the leading woman dancer of Spain. Other attractions were the Penny Vaudeville, the English Pep Show, Bep Hur, the big snake, and a fine show of electric effects. "The Minstrel Maids," Rodger and Wells, Nolan and Hines, the Empress, Searle and Drayton and the Gaston Sisters.

Jay Hunt's Benefit.

The bill for the testimonial to Jay Hunt at the Bowdoin Square Theatre Friday afternoon and evening promises to be the big gest yet offered at that theatre. The attractions include acts from "Faust," the "Wages of Sin," the "Colleen Bawn" and "King of the Desert." Miss Hunt and other members of the versatile family will appear. There will also be high-class vaudeville acts, and the bill will be of at least three hours long. This will be the last time Mr. Hunt will appear in this city.

Norumbega Park

Norumbega Park draws a strong hold on the Saturday amusement seekers. The restaurant overlooks the park, the beautiful Charles and the picturesque Boulevard. The Norumbega boat house has the most picturesque location on the Charles, and there are thousands this side of New York to come there with its associated garden. The great feature is the covered open air theatre, with its vaudeville programme. This week there are the Burke-Broderick Co., the Four Serenaders, in the sunny South; Charles Kenna, in "The Fakir"; Rae and Rosedetto, in their comedy acrobatic ladder act, and Dickson and Deane's return engagement of illustrated songs.

Paragon Park

"Hunting the Pelican" is the newest source of amusement at Greater Paragon Park, and it is said to be the most effective fun maker that has yet come to light. The big pelican, consigned to the Boston Animal Arena, escaped from its pen and was soon floating peacefully on the Bay. Then the chase began. The crowd stopped everything else to watch the fun. The keepers could not catch the bird, and Manager Bodge of Paragon Park offered a prize to anyone who would catch it. This stimulated the efforts of the small boy and the fish increased in cold. The bird seemed to enjoy the chase as much as the watchers. The chase was such a success that it was decided to save a "Pelican Hunt" every afternoon. It is the funniest thing ever invented.

The hill in the free open air circus this week is "La Belle Blanche and her thrilling live "Slide for Life" from the top of the tower, suspended only by her teeth; the great Belgacos, novelty gymnasts, and Will Hill, the high wire walker. The Maitland band, orchestra and other free features are all continued.

The Boston Animal Arena and all of the twenty other big shows, including Lovers' Lane, the Whirlpool Rapids, Dante's Hades and "Made in Paradise" are crowded daily.

Summer Ocean Trips

The recently completed State road, built under the direction of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, is one of the most beautiful drives out of Provincetown. Some of the views, with the sight of the ocean dunes and blue sea beyond, are wonderful in their charm. Provincetown is reached daily by the steamer Cape Cod, which leaves Bay Line Wharf, 100 Atlantic avenue, at 9 a.m., returning in time for the early evening trains out of the city. The trip affords a delightful sea voyage of a very low price.

Outing parties are finding it particularly to their advantage to spend their time at Bass Point, Nahant, landing from the steamers of the Nahant Ferry Co. Boating, bathing, fishing, dancing, skating in the open air rink, baseball, field games, free open air band concerts and dozens of other forms of entertainment and instruction make the delightful North Shore resort. The Nahant line steamers leave Rowe's wharf, Atlantic avenue, daily, and Lincoln wharf, foot of Battery street.

LABOR NEWS

TRADES UNION LABOR COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. ALLIED PRINTING 96

Preparations were made at last night's meeting of Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17 to order strikers to concern in those shops which have not signed the new wage scale agreement. Business Agent Kennedy reported that most of the shops had agreed to pay the new scale, which calls for $3.60 a day, instead of the present minimum wage of $3.

Besides the guarantee of full financial assistance from the international union it was reported that action was taken at the convention on the New England District Council of Sheet Metal Workers held at New Haven Sunday to stand back of the men in their demand. President John J. Hynes and Business Agent John F. Kennedy were delegates to the convention from the Boston local.

CARPENTERS TO MARCH.

By almost an unanimous vote, the members of Carpenters' Union No. 33 voted last night to parade Labor Day. The meeting was addressed by Sim Myers and George F. Tagen of the Central Labor Union Labor Day committee.

In anticipation of any trouble in that city, moral and financial assistance was voted the two Somerville carpenters' unions. Eighty dollars was disbursed in sick and accident benefits. Four candidates were initiated.

It is Mr. Beardmon's intention to thoroughly organize this territory before he leaves.

Of the $2500 sent by the Boston Association to aid fellow members in San Francisco, $900 has been returned, with the statement that more money was not from the different branches throughout the country that was needed.

WAKEFIELD, R. I., July 31.—Charles H. Rose of Hartford, known as the "Ivory King," and members of his family had a narrow escape as the automobile, loaded to unmanageable, dashed into a bridge here yesterday.

The front of the auto was crushed and reduced to a tangled mass of metal. When the car stopped all four occupants jumped safely to the ground.

WIFE'S STORY OF WHITE IS NEW THAW DEFENCE

CHORUS GIRL DECLARES HUSBAND'S VICTIM "TRIED TO COME BETWEEN US."

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Harry Thaw's strongest bulwark of defense against murder of Stanford White, it was learned today from a person who is closely in touch with the situation from the prisoner's standpoint, will be the early suspected slayer of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw that White attempted her to quit her husband a short time before he was killed.

"Sanford White tried to make me forget my duty as a wife and I told my husband."

Thus one of the main allegations at the time of the killing is revived.

Offer Letters as Proof.

What is considered to be ample and convincing proof of Mrs. Thaw's remarkable statements will be offered. It was made known that they will consist chiefly of the now famous letters written to her by White which have been hidden in the Tombs for years.

Persons who have knowledge of conversations between Mrs. Thaw and White and of facts related to the correspondence that passed from White to her will be placed on the stand. From these it is proved to come corroborative evidence.

In the story which she will tell the jury, Mrs. Thaw will go over in detail every incident and fact dating from her earliest acquaintance with Thaw to the night of the murder.

White according to her began his pleading a short time after her marriage in Pittsburg.

One of his principal arguments was that Thaw was not in a financial position to support her in proper style.

This was subsequent to the time when Mrs. William Thaw had reduced her son's income from $85,000 a year to a much smaller figure to show her disapproval of his conduct just before the marriage.

This line of defence was settled upon early in May by Thaw and his wife as the positive means of saving him from the electric chair, a long term of imprisonment or confinement in an asylum for the criminal insane.

The belief is that the rejection of this plan by the lawyers led to a split between Thaw and Black, Olcott, Gruber and Rumsey.

The attorneys were quite satisfied that they could not make this story sufficiently convincing to a jury to warrant more than a remote hope that it would serve as full exoneration for the killing of White.

Until his mother visit yesterday Thaw to a plea of emotional insanity with the compromise that he be permitted to take the stand and tell his own story. From the beginning he has believed that this story will constitute an almost complete defense.

His mother, who holds the checkbook to the Thaw millions, came in from Boston, Long Island, with her daughter, Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie and was driven direct to the Tombs, where she hoped to perfect the compromise.

The young prisoner, it seems, had read the morning papers, which gave a new account of the work of detectives in Pittsburg, who were gathering evidence to prove his insanity. He was in a most angry mood and extremely bitter against his relatives.

Wife Sides With Husband.

For the first time his young wife sided with him openly against his wealthy mother and sister. She said that she was convinced of her husband's sanity and that she believed, as the one most interested, he should have his way. She brought forward not a word of her own interest as his wife.

Fearing an open break, Thaw suggested that his wife leave him with his relatives. But the tears of these two devoted women did not change Thaw's idea in the slightest, and they soon left him.

When they found the young wife, frightened and uncertain, in the reception room, they had their revenge for her outspoken interruption in front of Thaw's cell. Several who witnessed the meeting declare that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw received a direct "cut" from her mother-in-law and Mrs. Carnegie. Finally they have left the Tombs arm in arm.

1,500 TUNNEL MEN STRIKE IN NEW YORK

Union Plans to Tie Up All Work on East and North Rivers, Involving 5,000 Men.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Five hundred men employed on the Pennsylvania tunnel went on strike to-day, and the plans of the union leaders contemplate calling out over 5,000 men, causing a general tie-up of all work in the tunnels under the East and North Rivers.

The strike has been by order of the new est of labor organizations, the United Tunnel Workers' Association, which was formed by the demands of the electrical workers for forty-five cents an hour.

When the demands were refused fifty electrical workers went out of the Pennsylvania tunnel, and the rockmen, drillers, compressed air men, laborers and engineers went out in sympathy. The last men to leave the Belmont tunnel job to-day are striking for the same reason.

ROOSEVELT ROOTS AT BASEBALL GAME

OYSTER BAY N. Y., July 31. A fierce encounter of rain interrupted a baseball game between the deck and engineer forces of the President's yacht Sylph in Orchard Bay, Oyster Bay, yesterday, and drove President Roosevelt and his sons Archie and Quentin, besides the other spectators, who were watching the game, to seek shelter. The game had reached the third inning and the score was three to three. The President was very enthusiastic over the fun on the grounds, and cheered both sides when a fast play was made.

Something a trifle easier than the Cubs will face the Tennesytes at the South End to-day in the shape of the Reds from Cincinnati, who came over from New York last night to remain here for a series of four games.

The Reds are going better than at any time this season and will give the locals plenty of mixing while here.

The presence of Si Seymour will be missed, as he has been traded to the Giants, but "Sandow" Mertes will be recognized cavorting in the field in a Red uniform.

With the many changes which have taken place in the ranks of the Reds they may spring a spasm of admirable playing which will go hard with the Tennesytes.

The Cubs got away with four straight and took the last game 3 to 2, which was the hardest contest of the lot for them.

It is up to Billie Young to greet the Reds, as he has not appeared since the team came back from its trip, and with the rest he has had should be in grand shape to trim the westerners.

The Cubs had a great chance to swell their total of wins while in the Hub and took full advantage of the occasion, as the result shows.

Lindaman made a bold attempt to stop the Cubs in the windup and might have succeeded if the team had given him the proper support.

At that the locals out-batted the Cubs, but could not get the hits together. Lundgren, who was facing the Hub batters, used his nobble all the way and never showed any signs of distress.

Bridwell and Tommy Leach Lundgren easy picking, as both got three hits apiece, but Captain Chance fared the same and Jimmy Slagle over the left fence was the long hop of the game.

Lindaman pitched nice ball after the first inning up to the seventh, as only a couple of hits were made up to that distance, but in the seventh four singles were produced which only netted two runs. In the ninth Chance's home run was the only one full.

PLAY NELSON TO WIN IN GANS FIGHT AT COLMA

After boasting around the bush with alleged interviews, the daily papers are at last forced to take the gaff and acknowledge that Joe Gans and Battling Nelson are at last matched to fight at Colma in the Ball. It was the intention of the promoters to keep the match a secret until after Nelson had disposed of Kid Herman, a task which every man with any pugilistic judgment believes he is capable of doing. When Herman failed to last the Axtell in twenty rounds he does not appear to have a look-in with Ball.

Many Predictions.

All sorts of predictions are made on this contest. Gans has never done the lightweight limit, 133 pounds at ringside, since he became well known. He did not beat Erne at these figures, and while the weights of the Britt-Gans fight were announced as 133 at ringside, this match was clouded with such a shroud of suspicion that nothing in the nature of a criterion can be gleaned from it.

But the lesson which Battling Nelson taught Herrera in the matter of weight will serve well in this match. Herrera tried to steal ten pounds on Nelson by forfeiting $1,000, believing that Ball and Nolan would not see the chance get away from them on a matter of weight, as Nelson had already beaten the decision.

Gans Must Make Weight.

This little trick will serve the Gans fan this and also the club promoter, Eddie Graney. While California has the reserved seats in Colma, where forty-five-round fights are permitted, it is understood the Mayor of the town will allow any one to run fights there if the $2,000 license fee is paid in advance of the event. This will suit the required partner, Morris Levy, to cut in. But Graney will watch Gans close and see that the negro has that last pound off his ring-side frame. He will have no repetition of the affair at Los Angeles.

The public generally is strong for Nelson in this fight. While formerly believing that Gans could not go the limit at ringside and be strong, they have changed a little, thinking now that he can do the 133 all right. The strength part of it is another question.

Nelson Will Be Strong.

Nelson can do the weight handily and be very strong. In fact, it is believed Nelson could do 131 at ringside and whip anything of his weight on earth. Before he fought Terry McGovern at Philadelphia a press correspondent worked with him for ten days at Essington, and on the morning of that fight, after taking a long walk on the road and then eating an early luncheon, Nolan sent Nelson on the scales and allowed me to weigh him. The Dane tipped the bar at 130½, and was as strong as an ox. He could have entered the ring at 131 with ease and still been strong.

Play Nelson to win. Gans cannot punch as before. That is entirely out. Even if some stingers on Barry Lewis in the boat between Philadelphia and Baltimore did never bore a mark. Only one blow, a right cross in the sixth round, staggered the Quaker. If Lewis could withstand his punches Nelson can also. It will be the same old story of Nelson's long fights, but the present writer will wear the negro down and finish him along about the twentieth round.

This is the one best bet.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 31.—Both Boston and the Ravens have an open date to-day and the managements have seized the opportunity to play off the postponed game of the last Boston series here. This is the deciding game of the current run, both crews having lauded two, and everyone has looked for an exciting contest.

Dineen, who lasted Powell in the opening frolic again opposed that worthy. Big Bill has been most anxious to have another crack at Red Jack, and promised Collins to repeat the former dose. Manager Callahan sent last night that there was also intels- no foundation to the rumor that he would part with any of his lads to McAleer.

Old Cy Young got a warm welcome from the fans yesterday. Cy was sent to the full and none down. Two hits were secured off him before he had a good chance to warm up. But after that there was nothing stirring. The three-bagger credited to Hemphill should have been Hayden's error, for the Boston fielder got both hands on the horsehide, but let go.

A splendid program has been arranged for the annual parish picnic and outing festival of St. Francis de Sales Church of Roxbury, which is scheduled to take place in Caledonia Grove, West Roxbury, August 7. There will be a baseball game between the married and single teams of the day, also a cracks football match and a tug of war contest, besides the track events.

AL KAUFMANN IS NOW HERE

THOMAS MEETS SULLIVAN IN CHELSEA BOUT TO-NIGHT

There will be a repetition of the local sporting fraternity to Chelsea to-night, where the much talked of fifteen-round bout between Joe Thomas of California and Tommy Sullivan will be decided under the auspices of the Lincoln Athletic Club.

In presenting this card the club has selected two of the best men in the world at 130 pounds, a weight which both can easily reach, and assures a hard hitting, slugging bee such as the sporting gentry love to witness. And that the bout will be fast and scientific from start to finish there is no reason to doubt, for both boys are anxious to secure a decisive victory, as the winner will then be matched against Jimmy Kelly of Chicago.

Among those who will be in attendance at the ringside to-night will be Billy Myers of Stoneham. Mr. Myers is superintendent of the Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., and was a great admirer of Tommy Sullivan, a boy he developed from the stack.

Myers will be remembered by the right hooking force of the days when Jack McAuliffe held the bounds. He fought a memorable battle at New Orleans with McAuliffe in 1892, the latter defeating Myers in the eighteenth round. During the same week Sullivan and Corbett fought for the heavyweight championship. Myers will be in Sullivan's corner and will advise the Law rence lad during the contest.

In the corner handling Thomas will appear Al Kaufmann, the California heavyweight, and his appearance will be awaited with interest by the local sports.

It is safe to assert from start to finish Chelsea will be the coziest spot hereabouts to-night, for with the portmen in the ring and the electric fan all demanded the battle is on.

The show opens at 8 o'clock, sharp, with a ten-round bout between Gus Lenny and Young Cribb. Next on the semi-final, for the lightweight championship of South Boston, eight rounds is a decision. Willie Brady and Coley McGowan will face one another, and the bout is creating a great deal of talk amongst the sports of the Peninsular district.

PROTECT INTERESTS HORSEMEN SHOULD PLAN A POLITICAL CAMPAIGN

Because a few cranks among the clergy have demanded the enforcement of an oppressive law, made under the dictation of a long-ago Intolerance, some horsemen have demanded that the clergy are their natural enemies, and responsible for the present and the future of the horse-racing industry.

This is a feeling that is very unjust to the good majority of the clergymen and of church-goers. Thousands of these are liberal and well disposed to horse-racing, and have nothing but disgust for the cranks. To show hostility toward the great body of Christian men on account of the inanities will only produce results worse than those at present existing, and is a blunder to better things to come.

If horsemen will but protest and scrutinize their own conduct they may find many reasons to inspire nobody but themselves. Leaving out everything else, I hold that their own personal, social and political indifference are most blameworthy.

They number tens of thousands of voters in this State.

What have they ever done to have these objections removed?

It is useless to go up after election. We are part of the National Trotting Association, our New England Breeders' Association, our State Agricultural Society, numbering thousands of voters, many of them men of great wealth and political power.

What have they done? What are they going to do? Have they ever made a move before caucus or election? Are the great trotting associations going to sit supinely with folded hands after all their great industry to be ruined?

Now, horsemen, it is up to you! What are you going to do about it? If we do nothing but moan like babies we shall be treated like babies. If we organize as men and organize to get our natural rights and work for them as men with real nerve, not velum, blood in their veins, we can and will secure the favorable consideration.

The blame rests principally on the horsemen themselves and on the culpable indifference of our great breeders and racing associations. Let them bestir themselves and put this whole matter plainly before the people. GET-THIN FAD HITS NEWPORT; SOCIETY WOMEN START TRAINING

Portraits of matrons and maids at Newport interested in the new fads that make women slender

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. Miss Edith Colford. Mrs. Robert Goelet. Miss Gladys Deacon.

Smart Set Adheres Rigidly to Rules of Exercise

By Cholly Knickerbocker

Sketch of Mrs. J. E. Widener.

DWELLERS in Newport's social history have the women looked so well. I mean well in the sense of robust, for they were ever faultlessly gowned. The Jew can in hours is showing itself in this season's society woman, who is sound of health, bright of eye and red of lip.

It is as though a curfew rang each midnight in this charming resort, so women walking thither from their cottages for a morning dip.

A rainbown twice a day, in regular athletic fashion, and dumbbells before and after meals are helping the social belle to renew her youth, or, rather, to continue her youth and slenderness.

Further to promote slenderness the women in training have gone on a diet. In the matter of diet is where they show character. It is easy enough to get up early, ride and walk all morning, but to it remembered these divergions give one an appetite, and the woman find the hardest part of training is to refrain from over-eating.

The women announced their white ribbon affiliation at the very start of the season at that dinner given by Mrs. Fish on the Fourth of July, which was arranged by Master Harry Lehr in such a patriotic manner as to induce gladness in the hearts of the have guests that were Americans. For the guests there were Bidons of Scotch and the choice rye, but nothing could induce the women to celebrate, even on Uncle Sam's birthday, with anything except mineral waters.

Fresh air and exercise are the other ingredients which, with the early hour and mineral waters, are contributing to make this new social woman.

The hour for rising is that laid down for the catcher of the proverbial worm. By 10 o'clock the business part of the city is a-buzz with shoppers.

The other morning I sauntered around Bailey's Beach at an early hour and to my surprise saw parties of women walking thither from their cottages for a morning dip.

I had a word with Mrs. William B. Rockler, who is most faithful in her training. Before immersing herself each morning in the Atlantic she is out for a long walk or a ride upon the back of a pretty hunter from the Rockler stables. Another favorite exercise of Mrs. Rockler, and one in which she indulges almost daily, is driving her coach-and-four, and the manner in which she handles the ribbons is one of the show sights of Newport.

Mrs. John C. Mallory has a business-like walk, and she thinks nothing of the stretch to Bailey's Beach from her cottage each morning - a distance of some five miles. Always Mrs. Mallory is accompanied on her morning walk by her walking stick and one of her several dogs.

Some of the hostesses of the week have complained that their guests have hardly touched their plates, and the disappointed chefs investigated, only to learn that food was fattening and that slenderness was the one thing desirable among the guests.

Standing in the Casino the other morning I noticed a great change in

Careful Diet and Rub-Downs Are Followed

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Harry Lehr, Mrs. Robert Goelet, Mrs. Craig Biddle, Miss Vera Gilbert, Miss Gladys Deacon, Miss Edith Colford, Mrs. Goelet Gallatin, Miss Sybil Kane and Miss Daisy Kidder.

Those women, with Mrs. Joseph E. Widener of Philadelphia, possess the most perfect forms of all the women in Newport. At fewest, one hundred others are taking treatment for slenderness and health.

The cottage colony awaits the arrival from abroad of Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, who last year returned to Newport after taking the "thin" cure so changed that I hardly recognized her.

Every Girl Expects to Be Married Some Day, and It Is Her Duty to Fit Herself to Be a Wife

By Beatrice Fairfax

GIRLS, you all hope to be married some day, don't you? And every one of you hopes to make a happy home for her husband, the sort of home that he will want to stay in and be proud in showing to his friends.

How are you preparing yourself to be the happy mistress of such a home?

Are you spending all your time in running about having a good time, or are you learning some of the household accomplishments that every woman should know?

If you dance well you will always have plenty of partners at a dance, but something more than dancing is necessary to make a good wife.

The serious-minded young man, whose attentions mean marriage, not merely flirtation, will look for the sterling qualities in the girl he wants to make his wife.

He will expect her to be a neat, capable housewife.

He will work hard and faithfully to give her a good home, and he will expect her to spend his money wisely and to make it go as far as she reasonably can.

Study Economy

UNLESS she knows something about housekeeping she cannot be economical.

She will not know how to market nor how to cook the foods properly after she buys them.

A working man should have wholesome, nourishing food. He cannot live on soggy pies and badly cooked meat and vegetables.

So go to work, girls, and learn all you can about cooking. No matter how busy you are, try and learn something about the simple rules of plain cooking.

Learn to make your own clothes and to mend them neatly. You can save a great deal of money by making some of your waists, etc.

Some day you will have to mend your husband's clothes, and now is the time to learn how. Nothing looks so forlorn as a man with holes in his socks and buttons off his coats.

Save your money, it will give you a little independent fortune for a rainy day, and will get you into good habits.

Do not marry unless you feel sure that you can manage on the amount of money your husband will be able to allow you.

Debt a Handicap

IF a young couple once get into debt, it handicaps them for years.

From the moment you become engaged to a man your chief interest should be to influence him to save as much as he can.

You can help a great deal by not demanding handsome presents nor expecting to be taken to entertainments all the time.

And when you dream of your future, girls, there is one thing more important than all others to be taken into consideration—that is, that you should love the man you marry with all your heart.

Marriage without love is bound to be a failure.

If you really love a man, you can put up with hardships, poverty, trouble, anything, as long as you love him and he loves you.

But if you don't love him, you will have no patience nor heart to weather the storms that come to every married couple.

Think this all over very carefully, don't rush into matrimony.

Be very sure that you can be a companion worth as well as a good wife before you decide on your life partner.

ARE WOMEN UNBUSINESSLIKE?

THE verdict pronounced by three women of wide experience in the business world is that woman is entirely unbusinesslike in her methods, although why this should be the case is not fully explained. Is training or nature at fault? one asks. One woman gives this as her opinion:

A woman's brain is so constituted that if she happens to be a routine worker she will more probably than not become a good automaton, who will never think for her self unless absolutely obliged to do so.

"As a rule, men who go into business have some precinctions of a business train ing, women have none. Boys, from their earliest youth, are generally far more control over more things, and they also have more opportunities of judging the value of money than have girls, even of the same social position.

A woman has generally to depend upon her husband for support. She does so, in my opinion, the reasons why there are so few women in business."

Another woman takes a somewhat less charitable view of the unbusinesslike attitude of her sex. The truth is that modern woman wants all the privileges of a woman plus all the advantages of a man. In business matters she expects to be organized because she is a woman. But she has not the slightest intention of waiving on the score of sex any privileges or advantages.

"She plays the feminine role so as to escape responsibility and demands that she should ever spoils appear on the scene, she claims the lion's share."

It is to be feared that the most capable business women are to be found, and there in limited numbers, in the business interests of their husbands

EDWARD ENQUIST, WIFE AND FOUR OF THE SEVEN CHILDREN HE LEFT DESTITUTE.

Clinging to the faint hope that she will soon hear some tidings of her missing husband, who left his family of eight with but one cent, Mrs. Edward Enquist of No. 145 Quincy avenue, Quincy, made the police today and asked if they had been able to do anything for her. They were compelled to tell the sorrowing woman who is trying hard to provide in some way for her seven children that they had not found any clue.

Enquist left his home without one word of explanation for his going. Mrs. Enquist says that he had not been feeling well for several days, and roundabout of pals in his head. She fears that, because of his sufferings, he may have committed suicide.

He had been out of employment and was despondent. When he left home he told that he was a burden instead of a help to his family.

There is $2 a week coming to the Enquists pretty soon. The eldest girl, who is fourteen years old has obtained employment in the Fore River shipbuilding and is to earn that amount. It is the only ray of explanation for his going. Mrs. Enquist is at a loss to know how she will provide for herself and her children.

WONDERLAND TO HAVE BIG MARDI GRAS CARNIVAL

Today the rush of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN readers to Wonderland really begins. Yesterday, on account of the constant threat of rain and the muggy atmosphere, but a few thousands braved the journey, but they were more than glad they had a better chance to see things than if the great resort was jammed with people.

To-day and to-morrow the free tickets cut from the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will be taken by tens of thousands by the grands on the island, and the refuges of the concessionaires will at once show how the popular price of 10 cents Wednesday is always the great and week day at Wonderland, but every day is a great one, for the attendance is settling down into a regular thing, now that Wonderland's countless attractions are so well known and thoroughly appreciated by the people of Greater Boston.

Preparations are now being made for the great carnival week, just what week will be selected has not been decided by the management of Wonderland, but it is likely that it will be right after Labor Day. The merchants and the residents of Revere are being consulted, for the purpose of making a success of Wonderland exclusively, although the greatest of spectacles, that of the Battle of the Flowers, is to come off in the lagoon.

Plan a Carnival Week.

Fred A. Bennett, the manager of the free circus in Wonderland, is arranging the details for the great week of carnival. He was master of the Mardi Gras in New Orleans for five years, and the wonderful spectacles of 1894, 1898, 1899, 1901 and 1902 were planned, engineered and developed by him. He declares that the carnival week at Revere and Wonderland is to be fully as good as anything ever seen in New Orleans, although probably not on such a large scale.

Floats of every description are now being planned and arranged for by the Wonderland management, and the merchants and public-spirited people of Revere, for the grand pageant will parade not only through Wonderland, but along the Shirebouleard at Revere. As yet plans are very incomplete and are not in shape for description, but Mr. Bennett is working hard to have everything ready for a monstrous demonstration.

The great attraction in the free shows at Wonderland this week, and vieing with the daring of the aeronauts, is the bicycle ride from the lagoon of the Shoots the Chutes inclined plane down into the waters of the lagoon for lookout by Miss Sadie Knowlton. Miss Knowlton, as is well known to Boston people, for she is a Boston girl, dares to do anything on a bicycle. At first the Wonderland management tried to dissuade her when she announced her intention of riding down from the dizzy height of the chutes and into the lagoon, but she said the risk was her own.

Shoots Chutes on Wheel.

Last evening she made the first of her wild rides, and executed it in a manner that held the thousands who saw her spellbound with admiration and unconcealed fear. The chutes had been prepared for the ride, and the elegin had been removed from one track to give her a free course. Vaulting lightly into the saddle, with a wave of her hands to the gaping crowds she flew straight down the steep track and dashed into the waters of the lagoon, which leaped over her in a mighty wave and cloud of spray.

Straight across the boiling waters the intrepid girl swam, and on reaching the opposite side hundreds of pairs of hands were extended to pull her out, amid a storm of cheers and handclapping she disappeared to her dressing room, declaring that the feat was nothing, nothing at all, and that she liked to do it.

One of the chief features of Fire and Flames at Wonderland is the startling realism of the dramatic performances staged every day on the narrow screen on the East Side of New York. The play is really and placed before a person as he sits in a comfortable seat in the midst of the rays of the sun by an ample roof.

Imagine seeing, with such realism as though it were an actuality instead of an illusion, a Hebrew clothing dealer chasing a thief through the street and calling the police at the top of his voice, or an angry mother spanking her boy, despite the jeers of the whole neighborhood; then the ambulance, the patrol wagon, the hurry of the murderer, all the excitement is liable to happen in almost any East Side New York street at any hour.

Ah, look, here comes the Salvation Army. Cymbals a-flying, girl nearby and a band of musicians, playing like mad. Fires, with the conventional red waists and red helmets, the hurry of the horses, and tambourines, matches around the corner.

Just as they always look, the army passes along the street and then stops to hold a meeting. One of the women mounts the drinking fountain and is created no end of fun before the guns appeared to bring on a walk straight and failing over everything in her way. Now the fickle scene is holding on for dear life to a friendly lamp post.

The woman rushes from the ranks and falls on the floor, where she kicks and rages and argues with him, the audience guessing all the while what the real cause of the pantomime work. Finally she leads to the fire limits, and he follows unsteadily, away, supported by his rescuer and friend, amphitheatre during the American flag.

This thing, while looks so real, is made in the little outside of Fire and Flames, is but a part of the show. It is one of the best sidelights on the rundrum of life that the great realistic show affords. The act is done by Florence Keenan, who former by was a telephone girl at the Milk street office. Her gift for emotional acting was discovered early, and was used to the stage for a career, and is now filling a long engagement at Wonderland in the Fire and Flames show with Rowland, the leader of the salvation army band.

Great Bargains in the Stores at This Season

Our Readers, WOMEN ESPECIALLY, Should Watch and Profit by the Opportunities That Are Offered

To advise an American woman to watch for bargains is about as superfluous as advising a trout to watch for flies or a hen to scratch for worms.

Nevertheless, we call the attention of women—and of men as well—to the opportunities of MAKING PURCHASES ECONOMICALLY just now.

This editorial is written FOR YOU WHO GET THIS NEWSPAPER.

It is a fact that in this dull season the merchants make extraordinary inducements in order to keep business.

They are obliged to keep on their great staffs of valuable clerks. Their rents go on, THEIR EXPENSES CONTINUE, AND THEIR INCOMES MUST BE MADE TO CONTINUE.

Two things in this world mean prosperity. First, MAKING money. Second—and almost as important—SPENDING THE MONEY WISELY.

This is the time when the woman or man, careful and economical, spends money wisely.

It is a fact that in the way of clothing, of furniture, of nearly all lines of merchandise, prices in many instances are actually cut in two.

In every single, well-managed store at this moment there are extraordinary bargains.

Mothers with growing children should avail themselves of these opportunities. They can buy all sorts of things now that will be just as good in six months; and they can buy them for twenty or thirty or forty less than they could be bought for six months from now.

IS EQUIVALENT TO MAKING MONEY EARN TWENTY OR THIRTY PER CENT. IN SIX MONTHS—DOUBLE THAT AMOUNT IN A YEAR.

There are many opportunities for MEN in the stores also.

One of the great merchants—speaking entirely for the information of this newspaper and not for himself—explains interestingly some of the very low prices for men's clothing "in midsummer."

He explains, in the first place, that enormous stocks were made THAT HAVE TO BE SOLD BEFORE THE END OF THE SEASON. The early sales at a good profit made enough money to pay for the entire stock.

In selling off the balance of the stock almost anything that might be received WOULD BE PROFIT. Stock not sold is dead—useless.

Therefore, prices are cut to an extent that would seem absolutely incomprehensible to one ignorant of the fact that the entire stock has been paid for on the early sales at the beginning of the season.

There are other special reasons for cheap selling in men's clothing. For instance, certain merchants purchase in great quantities what are known as "end pieces" of goods. These are the pieces of goods from which garments have been cut, and of which there is enough left to make one coat or one pair of trousers and no more. Goods under these circumstances are often sold at half price. Again it is the same thing; the sale of the greater part of the piece of goods has supplied the necessary investment and profit.

In the Summer time also intelligent and energetic merchants struggle TO GET NEW CUSTOMERS. They are trying to get into their stores women and men that have not dealt with them before.

They realize that it is the season of bargains, AND THAT THE WISE PURCHASER REMEMBERS A BARGAIN.

They say to themselves that if they can give such extraordinary values now to attract new customers, THEY WILL BE ABLE TO KEEP THOSE NEW CUSTOMERS AND DEAL WITH THEM ALL THROUGH THE COMING WINTER ON A BASIS OF HIGHER PROFIT.

We have said enough about the matter. We hope to fix your attention on the advertising of the stores at this moment. You will find almost everything of interest in this newspaper this week. Study the announcements carefully. Go to the stores for yourselves.

DON'T BUY THINGS BECAUSE THEY ARE CHEAP. That is a great mistake—a detriment to any person, however profitable it may be to the store.

But LOOK FOR THE THINGS THAT YOU REALLY NEED OR THAT YOU WILL NEED IN THE FUTURE.

You can get them cheaply now, and to-day's shopping, guided by the advertisements of the reliable merchants, will enable you to save a very considerable amount of money. Cut this out and remember it next year. This is the shoppers' harvest time. Don't neglect it.

To a Geranium

By Harry B. Metcalf

GERANIUM, beauteous with the glow of many blooms in one,
Flower most beloved that in my garden grows,
Redder than heart's blood, thy day has just begun
When it is saddened by the dying rose,
And brilliancy left over from summer's noon,
Is still thine own when first the aster wakes.

FULL many a fickle, fragile blossom, in the boon
Of one rare breath of fleeting fragrance breaks,
Then vanishes; but thou, from gla d June's jubilee
Until the Autumn whispers of the end,
In soft bestowal of thy spiced perfume, art constancy,
Oh, flower of all that blow, the truest friend!

HAS ALL THE STATE'S APPROPRIATION FOR MUSIC BEEN DISTRIBUTED?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is sincerely to be hoped that some of the money granted by the State for "music for the masses" shall reach so far as to include some of the splendid areas in Greater Boston's park system, declared by all who to be one of the finest systems in the world. The beaches, Marine Park, Common, Franklin Field and others for their music at municipal bands. Such publicity domain as the "Great Blue Hills" reservation, out Milton way, where thousands are going every day and every evening for recuperation, has nothing, as yet, provided in the way of music at the hands of the State.

Now it is assumed that not quite all of the appropriation has been distributed. Why not have the remainder devoted to the Blue Hills reservation crowds, composed of people who will enjoy it intensely, and including thousands who can "appreciate" it intelligently.

ARE THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHIMES A NUISANCE?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I respectfully request that your attention be given to what the people of the Back Bay district have aptly termed "a public nuisance." I refer to the indiscriminate singing of the bells on the new Christian Science Church.

During the early hours Sunday morning the people are kept awake by the chimes, which begin at 7 and continue until 10 a. m. At evening the bells, which are entirely void of color tune or harmony, ring from 5 to 7 p. m.

Even consideration of the matter will prove that chimes such as those on the Christian Scientist Church are also a daily nuisance, ringing every morning and evening.

While in sympathy with all true Christian sentiments, I do not think that the people of the Back Bay district can tolerate such a continual nuisance, even for sweet charity's sake.

Would like you to try out the sentiment of the people on the question.

A Wail From Long Island

By James J. Montague

I LIKE to see the world progress; I ain't a man that's found
Askin the wheels o' progress when they gits to goin' round.
Them automobiles does no harm, an' telephones is great!
I'm out for nearly everything that's new an' up-to-date.
But when it comes to these here folks that's flyin' through the air,
Well, maybe I'm a mossback, but my foot goes down right there.

THAT likely Jersey heifer that I bought last week is dead—
A sandbag dropped down Saturday an' caught her on the head.
You see that hole? My barn stood there, but some time in the night
A trailin' anchor picked it up an' yanked it out o' sight.
Along o' seven head o' sheep an' eighty rod o' fence.
That me nor any one has found a hide or hair of sence.

I GIT waked up all times o' night an' always feel my hair
A-raisin' when there's yells o' "Help!" up yonder in the air;
The dogs they start to barkin' an' the roosters raise a row,
An' the women git so nervous that they cannot sleep, somehow;
An' all the while that feller yells till I near go insane.
Expectin' any moment he'll come plumpin' down like rain.

WHEN we sight airships nowadays, the cracklin' barnyard fowl
All scurries into cover an' the dogs begin to howl.
An' when an anchor sails along, I stand an' throw a fit,
A-waitin' breathless till I see what next it's goin' to git.
I like to see the world progress, but I would just as soon
They'd hanged the evil genyus that invented the balloon.

Vacation

CITY life is galling,
Oh, for country joys!
Hear the country calling
Through the city's noise.

HEAR the cooling breezes
Lisp of woodland ways;
Think of shady trees
On these sultry days!

DREAM of rippling brookses;
Dream of velvet fields;
Dream of easy nookses
The quiet homestead yields.

"CHASE no business bubbles,"
Country whispers low;
"Here you'll lose your troubles—
Likewise lose your dough."

Mother's Love and a Mother's Hate

By Winifred Black

A CHORUS girl died in a Denver hospital the other day. The doctor said that she died of typhoid fever. The girl's mother came on from New England to get her daughter's body and take it home, and she was so infuriated when she learned that the daughter had been singing in the chorus of a comic opera company that she insisted on charging the attendant physician with crime.

But the physician's diagnosis of typhoid fever turned out to be absolutely correct, and the poor dead girl was put back into the forgiving old ground again and promptly forgotten.

The mother had a beautiful time talking to the reporters about the disgrace her daughter had brought on the family by going on the stage.

She never seemed to think of the disgrace she was bringing to the family by her exhibition of virulent vindictiveness which would not stop screeching for attention even on the brink of an open grave.

I've heard that chorus girl singing in comic opera—she was a pretty girl, sweet and modest and refined—and I always wondered why she had left her home to follow the will-o'-the-wisp of the footlights.

When I saw her mother I knew why that girl had left home. Such a mother as that is enough to drive any girl anywhere to get away from under the same roof that shelters a nagging virago.

That mother probably thinks she loved her daughter. She did not love her; she hated her with that most fearful of all human passions—the mother hate.

Motherhood doesn't change a woman's disposition, it simply intensifies it. If a woman is mean, small-minded, jealous and tyrannical before she has a daughter, she will be twice as mean, small-minded, jealous and tyrannical when she gets one.

As long as a child is small enough to be absolutely ruled by the mother, everything goes smoothly. The minute the poor thing begins to dare to think for itself, goodby mother love, good morning mother hate.

That woman who pursued her dead daughter with accusations, after the girl was dead, did not love her daughter, she hated her.

Why? Because the daughter chose to lead her own life and not the life her mother had chosen for her.

Your child is not merely your child, my good, nagging, watching, managing mamma.

She's a human being, with a human soul of her own and a human life of her own to lead. Let her lead it in her own way when she is old enough to know her own mind.

You have no more right to attempt to control your daughter of twenty-five, who takes care of herself, than she has to attempt to control you.

Mother love is a beautiful thing. Beware of mother hate.

"What's that? I can't go by 'till I drop in four more tickets? I can't, indeed—and we paid twenty cents already to get down here to Wonderland! We'll see about that—it's outrageous!

"That's right, Harold; good boy; run right along. Mommer will be with you in a minute, when she explains things to this man at the ticket box.

"I will not pay another cent, and you can do what you like, and I don't care if I am blocking up the passage, and I don't care if five hundred or five thousand or fifty thousand people are behind me—I don't you let me through, then!

"Good girl, Ethel; you are through, anyway. Well, what if they are my children?—I won't pay for them—I can't be expected to—you should have stopped 'em.

"No, I won't move on.

"No, I won't move back. Stand back yourself. You dare to come near me—you dare, and I'll—see this hatpin?

"No, I won't slip past when there's no one looking. I don't care if there's a billion inspectors. I'll walk right through, and you oughter know better than to try to hold up a lady the way you did.

"Thank goodness, there's twenty that!"

cents saved by the exercise of a little horse-sense and persuasion!

"Come along, Babesies, we'll all go and bump the chutes. What's that, Ethel?—you don't bump the chutes, you loop them. I know what part of you is going to be bumped if you're not respectable—I mean respectful.

"Come along, miss, and take that sulky look off of your face and enjoy yourself properly.

"What's that crowd over there? Where's Baby gone?—and Harold? Gracious goodness, Harold's putting baby under the camel's foot. Oh, save him—save somebody!!!

"All right, is it—all right, indeed. You little—you—you—

"You wanted to see if the camel would step upon the way the one in the circus did? I'll ergiah you, I'll circus you!

* * * * * * *

"Is this the thing we go down in? I will not do it—it's throwing one's life away—and what would Henry do without me? Don't giggle, Ethel, we're going to get out.

"Ouch! It's started—it's slipping—stop it, stop it—let me out—will no one stop the boat? Yoo-oo-oo—save me!

"Yoo-oo-ouch!

"Is it over?

"The nerve—to charge ten cents for that!"
